

FEBRUARY SALE (Until I say so anyway.)

Christmas has come and gone and having gone way over budget I was looking forward to settling down and counting the money.....sadly this didn't take as long as I thought and here I am desperately trying to get some more!

The good news is that I ran my stock quite well and come January 1st the warehouse had never looked so empty..... finally after 13 years I have got the hang of it. There is of course still plenty for everyone and this has lead me to have a good clear out and make room for some new and original wines for the next list.

Do pay particular attention to the lovely wines from the very finest vintages that are in the Bordeaux section such as all the 2005 wines and the Lynch Moussas 2000 that looks a cracker. The red burgundies from 2005 will be very hard to find these days as the vintage was nothing short of legendary and some of the Rhone wines will illustrate what cracking value they can be. White burgundy is a major love of my life and there are several star buys like the Saint Veran Terres Noires and the Marsanny, Louis Latour.

I think my wines from Spain and Italy have never looked so good and are offering some terrific value at the quaffing end. Australia is a country that is showing very well at tastings. I think we should be looking at the £8-12 mark and my list is going to very different next time around as I find new ones to offer.

Having worked so very hard at the wine game it has become abundantly clear that I would achieve more success selling crucifixes in Afghanistan. Subsequently we have launched ourselves into a property bonanza. Just as the market is looking increasingly dodgy and money getting more expensive to find and infinitely harder to get we have decided to build a house! Needless to say this will not be the least expensive thing I do and with both girls enjoying the benefit of a fabulously expensive education my days of sanity and liquidity are numbered. To that end please find the following wines for your delight.....
